The Hotels in Manitoba.

The Norris government of Manitoba is considering plans for compensating hotelmen for the loss of their leases, although the term "compensation" will be strictly tabooed.

Legislation will be prepared and introduced at the next session of the legislature, to provide certain powers for county hotels.

A government official stated that in rural communities, it was planned to give hotels the monopoly of cigar and tobacco vending, and of the sale of soft drinks.

Another minister (tentatively mentioned) was to give county hotels a monopoly of pool-tables, but pool-table proprietors were adverse to the suggestion, stating that if the hotelmen had control of the liquor business to their own ruin, then the pool-table proprietor should not put out of business to provide the hotelmen with the wherewithal to live.

Another proposal is for a bonus system, whereby the hotel would be made a community social centre; where community restaurants were substituted for the present parlors, and so on, the government would make a grant of as much per annum.

The whole plan is contingent upon

Average first year depreciation of the Ford Car is $125 as against $250 to $400 for practically any of the lower priced cars.

It is difficult to set any definite figure for the depreciation of an automobile, it depends largely on the condition of the individual car at the end of the season.

The average price paid for used cars in the $1000-class at any time during the past year is about $250 to $300 less than the factory price. But an average Ford sells very quickly for $125 less than the purchase price.

Compare the Ford depreciation cost of about $10 a month with the probable $20 or more a month that the other kind will cost you. Which is the better investment?

GERMANY READY FOR PEACE BUT ONLY ON IMPOSSIBLE TERMS

BRITISH HISTORIAN'S INTERESTING INTERVIEW
Professor Oman Says That German Fighting Forces are Soon To Suffer Through Lack of Men, and That the Heavy Casualties are Having a Depressing Effect

"Lord Kitchener is reported to have said from the first that this will be a long war. I consider that its ending will prove to be more a question of psychology than of military hardware. But the military and the military happenings alone will prove that state of public feeling in the belligerent countries can be easily gauged.

So Professor Oman, the distinguished Oxford historian, in a question to the New York Times correspondent of his published works will recall, has probably authored an excellent history of any other living students of history than any other living historian. But his views upon the war are not available for further reasons. From the very beginning he has been a consistent opponent in common with the censorious, and what is really more important, he typifies the English school of history which in England traditionally sits at the right elbow of statesmen.

"My views in connection with the censorship here in Germany newspapers in my hands should eight hours a day," he said, "and I can't say that the Germans are not ready for peace. But for peace only upon impossible terms, there is more fighting to be done."

"This means," then, "I said, as Professor Oman paused and looked reflectively, "that the more military preparations are to be made, the more lives are yet to be lost; that deeper layers of the German soul are yet to be wasted away so that agencies of all sorts are yet to be enlisted in the war, probably to be used in the substitution of battles for peace."

"But by no means," he answered quickly, "but what is to be done when each side is armed to the teeth and each side is fully aware that they are on top today and the other will be right tomorrow. The price they have to pay for this is that they will be top tomorrow, but this is not to be expected in any case. Germany's force-phobia does not profit her. We have undoubtedly had a very successful end, and we have very good reasons for believing that we can do it."

"Let us take, for instance, the German casualties. A recent estimate by responsible persons in Berlin, respondent of The Times, pretty accurately states that the German army has acknowledged. Out of a total available, 9,000,000 men it is more than 1,000,000 who are now in the field. Some 600,000 are already out of action for good. A simple calculation will show how such a loss would affect the classes which are yearly called to the colors, must in the end exhaust those classes. In the case, it is demonstrable that their fighting forces will eventually suffer through exhaustion."

"The way in which they made their casualties public is very significant. At first they were very careful to print the most elaborate details of every casualty; the place and date of the wound, the name of the soldier, the wound stated, and sometimes it was even told where the man was in hospital when he was reported to be reprinted in the newspapers. But now the German papers are not afraid to print the names of the men upon the epitaphs, and the full details, as given in the earliest number of the official lists, as stated in the official lists. The name of a German remains to be told, but when it is stamped in the local effect, would be too depressing."

"But there are a number of interesting things besides this, which a common reader of the British and German press brings home to me. One is the very careful and exacting way in which news from English papers receives, and even American news, for that matter, is received. This was probably astonished when passage from an article of his entitled 'Germany's War', published in the January number of The North American Review, were joyfully quoted in the German and Hamburg Nachrichten as substantiating British atrocities."

"The official character of these articles gives itself away by the simultaneous appearance of the name of the Socialistic Vorwärts, and let us say the anti-socialist German monthly, like the Deutsche Presse."

The official character of these articles gives itself away by the simultaneous appearance of the name of the Socialistic Vorwärts, and let us say the anti-socialist German monthly, like the Deutsche Presse."

"The three great advantages which the Germans have over us, are that they seem to me to be appearing more frequently than we do during the earlier stages of the war. That is to say, the people need encouraging, and to be told that they are doing well, makes it clearly explicable, as well as our duty, to keep affecting German morale."

Professor Oman stopped talking, and walked across the room to where some people were gathered, and where the whole wall space, were bursting with volumes dealing with the American War. "I am sorry," he explained, "to see if it was General Robert E. Lee, who spoke of duty as the last word. That is the only language."

"Now, well, my dear, did the photographer succeed in making the baby look pleasant?"

"No, not at all; the baby succeeded in making the photographer look unpleasant."

Grain Transportation

Under Normal Weather Conditions Railways Should be able to Handle the Crop

Immediately after the recent opening of navigation on the Yukon River, there was a rush for vessel accommodation for the transportation of grain. But the grain, and military happenings alone will prove that state of public feeling in the belligerent countries can be easily gauged.

In 1884 Professor Oman brought out his first volume, "The Art of War in the North American Northwest," in which a study of his published works will recall, he has probably authored an excellent history of any other living students of history than any other living historian. But his views upon the war are not available for further reasons. From the very beginning he has been a consistent opponent in common with the censorious, and what is really more important, he typifies the English school of history which in England traditionally sits at the right elbow of statesmen.

Miracle Wheat

Popular Idea Regarding Alleged Productivity of Certain Varieties of Wheat

The United States Department of Agriculture discusses the "miracle wheat" idea in the following statement:

"The notion that there is a wonderful wheat which will make the fortune of anyone who plants it seems to itself. In this country, at least, such an assertion was made for the so-called 'miracle wheat' at approximately 1870, and under the name of Alaska wheat, this identical variety was sold. With a one-dollar at fifteen hundred dollars per acre, the price was high, the dream of the horseless carriage at the universal vehicle was high.

"But inventors and manufacturers assumed the public the promise of a miracle wheat which will make the fortune of anyone who plants it seems to itself. In this country, at least, such an assertion was made for the so-called 'miracle wheat' at approximately 1870, and under the name of Alaska wheat, this identical variety was sold. With a one-dollar at fifteen hundred dollars per acre, the price was high,

"Because of the many attempts made to prove the value of this wheat, one name or another on the farms of the country, the United States Department of Agriculture has made a number of experiments to determine the value of these varieties of wheat possesses any peculiar quality which justified high prices."

"As a matter of fact, the so-called Alaska wheat belongs to the Poulard group of wheats, which are grown to some extent in the Mediterranean region of Europe, but to any considerable extent in the United States, the wheat of the wheat made by the department of agriculture in a number of experiments to determine the value of these varieties of wheat possesses any peculiar quality which justified high prices."

"And of this popularity comes a problem, foreseen only by the more astute inventors and manufacturers, that the public will be led to believe that the wheat is good and may be sold at a high price."

"The wheat of the Poulard group has been brought into evidence by the announcement that he has made an arrangement with the Canadian government to supply the wheat to the United States in exchange for a number of dollars."

THE BOW ISLAND REVIEW.

W. P. COOTON, proprietor.

Published at BOW ISLAND, ALBERTA, this 26th day of May, 1916.

The Review is informed that owing to the non-attendance of the members, no meeting of the Red Cross has been held in town for several weeks. Whether this was due to the unusual amount of sickness prevalent we cannot say. It is to be hoped, however, that the extreme usefulness of this organization in Bow Island will not be allowed to slacken, for the need is as urgent now as at any time since the commencement. Indeed when one considers the increasing number of men who are leaving Canada for the front, and the relatively larger proportion who come back sick and disabled, it must be realized at once that greater efforts are necessary if the Red Cross organization is to cope successfully with the work it has taken in hand. And to this work we should all contribute a share.

When the matter of forming Consolidated School districts was first introduced some time ago by the Department of Education, it was treated with a certain amount of indifference in various parts of Alberta. The benefits of the new system are now, however, being better recognized and appreciated, with the result that many districts are going into the subject with renewed interest. Burdett, we understand, has already taken the matter up with the Department and will endeavor to have a vote taken in the district as early as possible. Bow Island has given a certain amount of time to its discussion, but so far nothing definite has been done. The matter will, however, be taken up with the various school districts affected at an early date, and their opinion obtained.

Case of Interest to Local and General Farmers.

Machinery companies and the like will be able to extract the last resources from farmers in this province in payment of notes that have been obtained under what practically amounts to false pretenses. This was made very clear by his lordship Mr. Justice Walsh this morning in determining the judgment in the case of Roulet vs. Leighton.

The defendant was sued one of the makers of a note for $1,382.50 and interest, payable to said plaintiff, which was made under the following circumstances: The Penn-Alberta company bought an oil-drill tractor from the plaintiff. It failed to make up the warranty of it given to the plaintiff, and so a dispute arose. This dispute led to the agreement on the part of the plaintiff to deliver a new motor, when an adjustment of the outstanding paper of the Penn-Alberta company has been made. A coalition of the adjustment was that the members of the company, of which the defendant was one, were to give their personal notes, and it was one of these notes that was being sued upon.

That it was proven to the satisfaction of his lordship that the agreement of the plaintiff was not lived up to is shown by the latter half of his judgment, which was as follows: "The master, instead of being a new one, had been sued a good deal, and I should say that he had received very bad handling in the law suit that has been made of it. I need not detail here the condition of its valuable parts. It is set out clearly in the evidence of Guyot, of which there is no contradiction. It is sufficient for me to say that it is not the master which the plaintiff bound itself to deliver and which the defendant had the right to think would probably remain there for a time."

Mr. R. L. Stone, who has been spending a few weeks with friends at Calgary is expected home to-day.

EVERYTHING is now on the up grade, and consequently the advice given by the Dominion Government to the people of Canada to economise is timely and good.

When goods are increasing in price, the household naturally devotes a little more time in considering his purchases, and is always on the lookout for bargains. Business at Hoaglin's has increased wonderfully of late, solely because prices there are kept within the reach of all, which means that they are THE LOWEST IN BOW ISLAND.
